

PUBLISHED IN THE LOS ANGELES BUSINESS JOURNAL
August 23, 2010

HOME MOVIE

The Los Angeles Business Journal noted on August 23 that Brian Kabateck, who has been in news lately for numerous litigation matters including a subprime lending lawsuit, the Armenian genocide and the Station Fire, was recently tapped by the movie Inception. The producers used Kabateck's Craftsman-style home in Pasadena in flashbacks and several pivotal scenes in the hit movie this summer. In the movie, the 1908 house belonged to lead actor Leonardo DiCaprio.

In the article, Kabateck noted that he doesn't get star struck anymore, given his slate of entertainment clients, but he admitted that it was "cool" to meet several of the lead stars.