

WIRED

November 12, 2008

CLASSMATES.COM SUED OVER DECEPTIVE ADVERTISING

Wired magazine reported that a San Diego plaintiff filed suit against Classmates.com for allegedly tricking him into signing up for the company's premium service – at a cost of $15 per quarter. The suit, which was filed in state court, seeks class action status and could include hundreds of thousands of plaintiffs who were similarly duped. The suit claims deceptive advertising and could involve millions of dollars in subscription fees. Kabateck Brown Kellner LLP represents the plaintiff.