

Brian Kabateck and Mark Geragos Donate $200,000 to Loyola Law Center's Genocide Studies Program

LOS ANGELES – August 18, 2010 –Brian Kabateck from Kabateck Brown Kellner and Mark Geragos from Geragos & Geragos recently announced a $200,000 donation to Loyola Law School's Center for the Study of Law and Genocide. The donation to the Center comes from a portion of a $17 million settlement by French insurance company AXA with descendents of Armenians who had life insurance policies signed before World War I. The Los Angeles attorneys started the Center in 2007 with a similar donation that resulted from a $20 million dollar settlement with New York Life, in connection with its failure to pay relatives of Armenian policyholders connected to the Armenian Genocide.

"We are honored to be able to continue to fund programs that we believe are a critical part of the study of law," says Kabateck, managing partner the well known plaintiffs' law firm in downtown Los Angeles. "The money will be used to carry awareness of the Armenian genocide into the present, including the Holocaust, Cambodia, Rwanda and current events in the Darfur region of Sudan."

Kabateck and Geragos are graduates of Loyola Law School and sit on its Board of Directors. They are also of Armenian descent.
